This sentiment was vociferously applauded, and the Judge retired.

Gen, Boscerane's Army. Ince of the two heatile armies at the theat Mcentain Gaps are gradually approaching and the pickets are now climost within gunshot of each other. Of course nothing would please like better than to have Whise create a diversion on the Kanawha that would induce Gen. Resecrates to windraw his forces from the Gaps, and so leave a weak point exposed to the authorizements of the country. Gen. Loe, it is supposed, will be hardly gratified. But it must be seen that the size given in his correspondence some time ago, as to the imperative domain for troops here, was not given a day too soon. We may suffer yet, because the people at leams are been and are too skeptical on as vital a point.

St. Lovin, Sept. 2.—The Democrat has advices directly from Gen. Jeff. Thompson's camp at Benton, Scott county, to the effect that all the reclude's heavy biggage at that and other points is being hastily removed to New Madrid, and that Thompson's and Hardee's commands would attempt to effect a junction and fail back on Syketown, the terminus of the Calro and Falton resirrond, where it is supposed they would make a stand and give Gen. Trentiss battle.

The combined strength of Thompson's, therdee's and Filton's commands are estimated at 50 too. Reports were current youterday and to day that Gen. Prentiss had surprised a camp of Miscouri rebels near Bloombeld, Stoddard county, and had taken eight hundred fifty riscours without firing a guin, but they need out from the confirmation.

Like master, like man," is an adage that has its political as well as social significant of the state of the sta

"Like master, like man, is an adage that has its political as well as social significance; and in this case we examot avoid its application. Mr. Russell vindicates his right to est the bread of our enemy.

But suppose master and man succeed; that by falsehoods impugning the material resources, courage and credit of the North; by hearty encominms of the South; by artfully exciting the aristocratic prejudices of the castle and manor-house against a Democracy; and by well put appeals to the dollar-interest of Lancashire and Birmingham—the anti-slavery prejudices of the masses are overcome, international fair dealing is forgotten, old the and old friendships are disregarded, and the Government is brought to recognize the Confiderate States—what then? The relation of the belligerents is not changed, our blockade is not affected, none of our rights are impaired. The set of the English Government would be a proclamation that in its opinion we had failed to make good our pretensions—that we are better at brazeine than at fighting, and that the its opinion we had failed to make good our pretensions—that we are better at hragging than at fighting, and that the compulsory enforcement of the laws of Congress in the seceding States is impossible. All this would be sufficiently galling to our pride, and ruinously destructive of the feelings of friendable that have been growing up between the two nations since 1815, but, further than that, it would not be neighblicial to our cause. We should just as free to go on with our warlike preparations, as ever before. Unquestionably, recognition would be followed by any amount of jubilation in the South, and by these mortification in the North; but as soon as the rebels learned that the act by which they were numbered among the nations of the earth was only paper comfort, that it would not let out a bale of cotton, open a port, bring them a gun, nor keep back a Foderal trooper, they would put a wiser estimate upon that which now seems to them the most desirable object to be attained.

For one thing we think the country may be prepared—that as soon as decency and affety will permit, the favorable disposition of the English middle classes will be overboars, and the South recognized as un independent power. And when England leads of, France will follow. Whatever we may say about either country, the government of the Queen, as well as that of the Emperor, is casentially an Aristonact. The say is the same of the second to be the second to the best person to the best person to the second to the second sain channels of water communication, along full haif of the sea front of the State, are now open to our gun-boats and steamers of light draft, and from them an army of any required number of thousands may be landed to operate against the enemy's rear. The intentions of the Government are no doubt foreshadowed in the occupation of the forts from which the rebels were dislodged. With them in our possession to fall back upon in case of need, we have a foot held that may well create anxiety among the North Carolina troops opposite Washington; and one of the frait of the consequences of the capture may be their flight, on a double quick, toward heme, in the meantime, let us hope that crait of the proper draught of water will be immediately sent through the fullet, and up and down the bays and rivers of which it is the outer gate, and that every schooner, brig and shallop, that can mount a gun or carry a man, may be burned to the water's edge.

War meetics at menotas.

A large and enthunisatic War Meeting at Mendots was addressed by Hon, Owen Lovejoy, on Wedneedy last, with the happlest effect. He assumed the right under the war power of the Government, to confiscable the property of the rebels, including slaves, and mistice, as the gall state, and the state of the covernment, to confiscable the property of the rebels, including slaves, and mistice, as the war a counter for self-preservation, that this right should be vigorously exercised. This demand of the speaker was a sponded to by the people with vecifierus cheers. Mr. L. was acceeded by Prof. Dunn, who enforced by new applications the irruth of Mr. Loveloy's remarks. The meeting was a great success.

on foot, and when they are mounted, will be worthy of the President.

There is now being constructed an arm, new and places, they have become so good friends, that they are said to wade out in the river, exchange carteens, and takes drink! The number of officers at the hotels and in the streets is on the Increase. Frobably this is a necessity, on account of the many new ragiments and companies arriving. But some I have known to be on fariough from their commands for about a week. It is possible we are praising Gen. McCleilan too much, and that our discipline is yet the from perfect.

Dan Stelles has finally been made a Brigadier General. It cannot be denied that he has exerted himself nobly, and has true military inlent in him. His appointment made by the President in the face of strong opposition, gives grateful assurance that the finger of Mr. Liscoth is yet stronger in the army than the loins of Cameron. The affectation of such a high morality in the Scotch Regiment, that they could not think of going his the bickles Brigade without horror, must be taken cwm groups saits, especially when externations so many mutineers. The decision of Judge Wayne in favor of Col. Gorman, will tend to ectile the disaffection in the regiments.

Irg what the hades would call "a handsome young man." What can be more haderous than the idea of a warrior in gold speciveles. Under the intolerable abuse of senseless teamsters, and of militia officers, who fanded that a here was like a lecomotive and never got tired, the first lot of army horses are used up and well nigh worthless. There is a saie of such as are unfit for service, at Webster, to day, and numbers of persons of a speculative turn, here gone over to buy, for a trifle, animels which, after a few months' yeat and decent treatment, they will be ready to self back to the Government again, at the round Government prices. By the same system of management we have now here over a hundred and fifty valuable horses, readered worthless, for the time at least, by the distribute. somer.
